Whether it’s a result of age, child birth or simply a cosmetic insecurity, women are regularly asking about treatments to address urinary incontinence and other intimacy concerns.

Urinary incontinence commonly leaves the sufferer with psychological morbidity, particularly depression.*

A BMJ study found 97% of GP’s surveyed found their female patients had expressed concern about their genitals and whether they were normal.

More than a third of women between 45 and 50 avoid athletic activities out of fear of an incontinence episode.

A breakthrough High Intensity Focused Electromagnetic technology (HIFEM) for all forms of women’s incontinence

• Treats entire pelvic floor
• 2/3 of the treated patients reduced or totally eliminated the use of hygienic pads*
• Comfortable treatment without downtime yields higher patient retention and conversion rates
• Operator and consumable free therapy maximizes practice profitability

Common exercise (Kegel)

BTL Emsella

A single HIFEM session brings thousands of supramaximal pelvic floor muscle contractions, which are extremely important in muscle re-education of incontinent patients.

“Our results with Emsella have been extremely impressive. The technology allows for more comprehensive rehabilitation of the pelvic musculature than standard stimulation techniques and works the muscles in a supra-physiologic fashion. Based on our practice’s and my colleagues’ results, this has produced more rapid and significant improvement over comparative options.”

I just wanted to go back to how I was before. The treatment was so comfortable. It was quick. And very effective as well.

There is so much confidence that comes from this... On average, I noticed I was getting up 4 – 5 times a night. Now I get up 1 time a night. It's game changing.

I have a great group of friends. We're all in our mid-forties, so things are changing... and I tell them it's really helped tremendously.
